

DINNER AT EIGHT: A PLAY IN THREE ACTS

During the Great Depression, society matron Millicent Jordan has bigger problems: she is planning a dinner and Lord and Lady Ferncliff have just accepted. As her daughter Paula's romantic complications mount and her search for an "extra man" to complement former stage star Carlotta Vance proves fruitless, the lady and all her guests...

Reader's Opinions

This cardboard play is known today only because of the terrific film version, written by Herman Mankiewicz, Frances Marion, Donald Ogden Stewart -- and directed by the wonderful Geo Cukor. The play itself is a snore, which can be said of most of the Kaufman oeuvre.
