

THAW

The repercussions of Hazel Boone's lifelong weakness for temptation percolates down through generations wounding everyone in her path, including her son, the painter David Boone and his young apprentice, Tilley Gover. During a winter of constriction nearly seventy years after her birth, these familiar strangers from Cupboard Cove are still reeling. When Hazel's heat finally...

Reader's Opinions

This might deserve a 3.5. It was better than I expected. I didn't expect much, but still. It brought things around in an interesting way.

Well, this was a wonderful surprise! I purchased this book from the clearance table at my local used book store. I wasn't sure what to expect, because I wasn't familiar with the author. But she is a Canadian writer, so right there, that bodes well. This novel, set in small-town Newfoundland, is full of local flavour, flawed characters,...
