

THE BLACK PRINCE AND OTHER STORIES

The South of these nine stories is filled with tension, crisis, and decision: a man walks out of prison only to entangle himself in the strands of his malevolent past; a diabolic stranger sets a small community against itself; a family clothes its poverty...

Reader's Opinions

I am a fan of The Keepers of the House and having been so favorably influenced will always think Grau's style and her work some of the very best. Her short stories are still meaningful and quite powerful after 60 years and I did enjoy all nine. She wouldn't have the gut-punching impact of A Good Man Is Hard To Find by Flannery O'Connor,...
